Revalidation for Doctors in Training

Are you ready?

From the 3rd of December 2012 the revalidation regulations will go live. That means that anybody who has registration with the GMC will need to start collecting evidence to support their eventual revalidation.

Revalidation Due Dates – When will mine be?

Your revalidation date will be set by the GMC who will be in touch with you directly. These dates should all be issued by 3rd December 2012. The allocation will be based upon either your CCT date or five years from the date of initial registration with the GMC, whichever is earliest.

What evidence do I need to collect?

The main thing that doctors need to do is to be involved in the ARCP or RITA process. A new Form R has been developed and you will be asked to complete this prior to your review meeting. The enhanced Form R asks specific questions about your Fitness to Practice and includes questions on your Scope of Practice, Significant Events, Complaints, Compliments, Probity, and Health. You will need to ensure that you retain a full copy of your ARCP documentation to submit for your eventual revalidation review.

Where can I find more information?
