Routine pregnancy testing before operations

Information for parents and guardians

It is very important we know if any young woman having an operation may be pregnant. This is because an operation and anaesthetic may damage the unborn baby. It is also safer for the patient if doctors looking after a female patient know that she is pregnant.

Although there may only be a very small/tiny number of pregnancies in this age group, we believe that testing all relevant patients is the most effective way of avoiding this harm. On the day of the operation all young women aged 12–16 years and their parents will be asked to give consent to providing a sample of urine for a pregnancy test.

If a pregnancy test is refused we will discuss the safest way of proceeding but we hope you will recognise the reason for our decision.

Your understanding will be greatly appreciated.

Routine pregnancy testing before operations

Information for young women aged 12–16 years

It is very important to know if you are pregnant before we carry out an operation. This is because an operation and anaesthetic may damage an unborn baby. It is also safer for you if the doctors looking after you know you are pregnant.

We know that only very few girls your age become pregnant but it is important that we look after everybody as safely as we can.

We believe that testing all young female patients is the most effective way of avoiding harm. On the day of the operation you and your parents or guardians will be asked to give consent to providing a sample of urine for a pregnancy test.

If you and/or parents or guardians feel that this is not possible we will discuss the safest way to look after you.

We hope you understand our reasons for this testing.

Valuables should not be brought into the hospital. If patients have to bring in valuable items they should ask a nurse to store them safely and request a receipt for the items. You may not be able to have the valuable items returned if the time of discharge from hospital is out of hours.

We are sorry but the Trust cannot accept responsibility for loss or damage to items not given for safe keeping.
